SQORUS Becomes a Workday Partner to Support its Customers in Their Transformation Projects

SQORUS is pleased to announce a new partnership with Workday, a leader in enterprise cloud applications for finance and human resources. SQORUS is now officially recognised as a “Workday Business Advisory Partner.” With this new partnership, SQORUS reinforces its commitment to supporting its clients in their HR and finance transformation projects using Workday solutions.

SQORUS (formerly Des Systèmes et des Hommes) is a Digital Services Company (DSC) specialising in consulting on digital transformation in HR, Finance and IT functions. With over 33 years' experience working with large companies on international, strategic IT projects, SQORUS offers services including evolution strategy, choice assistance, integration, business intelligence, data management, support and change management.

“This partnership with Workday is a logical extension of the business advisory we already provide to our customers, for Workday and other solutions,” said Lionel Chemla, associate director, finance and business transformation business unit, SQORUS. “As a Workday Business Advisory Partner, SQORUS will now leverage our expertise in project management, business analysis, support and change management, third-party application maintenance (TMA) and continuous improvement for Workday solutions to better support customers.”

By combining the HR, Finance and IT consulting capabilities of SQORUS with Workday's advanced technology innovation, customers will get comprehensive and reliable project management and advisory support –from design to implementation. SQORUS consultants, now Workday Business Advisory accredited, will offer expert support to maximise the value derived from Workday investments.

“We are excited to collaborate closely with Workday, a leading provider of cloud solutions for HR and financial management,” said Kokou Moglo, associate director, HR division, SQORUS. “This partnership will enable us to offer even more comprehensive and tailored services to our clients, helping them fully harness the potential of Workday technology.”

“We are very proud of this new partnership with SQORUS, whose widely recognised expertise and reputation will enable us to accelerate our development in the French market, driving greater agility for our joint customers as they navigate changing business requirements,” stated Hubert Cotté, vice president and country manager, France, Workday.

About SQORUS

SQORUS is a consulting firm focussed on digital transformation of HR, Finance and IT functions. For more than 30 years, our consultants have been working with major companies on strategic and international projects, around information systems: development strategy, choice assistance, integration, Business Intelligence, Data Management, support and change management, but also on issues around the Cloud and Artificial Intelligence.

SQORUS always adapts its expertise and working methods to the new digital challenges, such as cloud, SaaS or IA. It has succeeded in forging strong partnerships with the main software publishers in the market and in attracting business and technical experts.

Its strength: its 250 talents dedicated to the success of clients' projects and sharing strong values: diversity, commitment and solidarity, which constitute a real value for the company and its clients.

Great Place to Work for 9 consecutive years, SQORUS is sensitive to the development of its Sqorusians, their career evolution and their training on future solutions.
